

We invite applications for a position at the rank of tenure-track assistant professor to begin September 1, 2022. We seek a dynamic, creative, productive scholar and teacher with a specialization in the history and theory of media, including but not limited to cinema, who would complement the research and teaching agendas of our current faculty. We are especially interested in scholars whose research and teaching also engage one or more of these fields: literature since 1945, contemporary and transnational literatures, poetry and poetics, Jewish studies. The successful candidate will have native or near-native fluency in German and English and will be expected to teach a full range of courses across our undergraduate and graduate curricula. Applications should consist of a letter of inquiry, CV, teaching statement, writing sample of circa 25 pages, and three letters of recommendation. For fullest consideration, apply by November 5, 2021. Ph.D. is expected by appointment start date. Interviews will be conducted via Zoom. Our faculty is committed to building an inclusive intellectual community and strongly encourages applications from women and members of underrepresented groups. We are especially interested in candidates who, through their research, teaching, and service, will contribute to the diversity and excellence of our department. This position is subject to the university's background check policy. You may apply online at <https://dof.princeton.edu/academicjobs>.

Princeton University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to age, race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law.

Position is open until filled.